Some IRS and FDA workers to return despite shutdown IRS recalling 46,000 for taxes Food to be inspected

Internal Revenue Service is recalling about 46,000 of its employees furloughed by the government shutdown — nearly 60 percent of its workforce - to handle tax returns and pay out refunds. The employees won't be paid.

With the official start of the tax filing season coming Jan. 28, the Trump administration has promised that taxpayers owed refunds will be paid on time, despite the disruption the partial shutdown now in its fourth week. There had been growing concern that the shutdown would delay refunds going out because the money wouldn't be available for them from

Last week, the administration said customary shutdown policies will be reversed to make the money available and refund payments on time if possible.

An IRS document detailing its new shutdown plan shows that 46,052 agency employees will be called back to work, of the total workforce of 80,265. It says the plan will take effect as soon as the Treasury Department issues an official notice.

About three-quarters of U.S. taxpayers receive annual refunds, giving them an incentive to file their returns

NEW YORK (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration said it will resume inspections of some of the riskiest foods such as cheeses, produce and infant formula.

The routine inspections had been briefly halted as a result of the partial government shutdown.

FDA Commissioner Scott Gottlieb said Monday that the agency is bringing back about 150 unpaid employees for the inspections. Riskier foods account for about a third of the agency's roughly 8,400 routine inspections each year.

The FDA oversees packaged foods and produce. Meat, poultry and processed eggs are checked by the Department of Agriculture and have continued to be. States handle about half of the FDA's inspections and those haven't stopped. FDA inspections of imported foods and other core functions such as monitoring for food poisoning outbreaks have continued as well, the agency said.

Lack of downtown grocery big concern at Main Street event

Concern over the lack of a downtown grocery came up multiple times Monday night as Madison residents were given the results of a December survey they filled out as part of an information-gathering effort put together by the National Main Street program.

Kathy LaPlante, the senior program officer for the National Main Street program, presented the results Monday evening to just more than 100 attendees, noting early on that more than 500 people completed the survey about Madison during the month of December. This was the highest number of active participants in any of the Indiana cities involved in the survey effort, including much larger cities such as Terre Haute, which has a population just more than 60,000 compared with Madison's, which is just less Madison also set another survey record. LaPlante said the lack of a downtown grocery received the "strongest" percentage of reported concern in any survey the program has seen before — 90 percent.

The top issues in the order most often noted by respondents, LaPlante said, were varieties of retail stores; hours of businesses; crime and drugs; parking, particularly around the courthouse; buildings in poor condition, and no grocery.

Ruler, the only grocery in downtown Madison, was closed March 31, 2018 by its parent company, Kroger. The grocery was located on the south side of West Second Street between Main and Mulberry streets. At the time it closed, the store employeed 14. The building remains empty today.

Madison Mayor Damon Welch said at the time the grocery closed that a downtown grocery "is vital to thousands of downtown residents, employers, and thousands of visitors each year."

A consultant was been hired to look for a grocer to open a full-service grocery in downtown Madison, Welch said in mid-Oc-

The Redevelopment Commission is paying the $12,000 fee for a six-month contract with the consultant, said Matt Wirth, executive director of Jefferson County Industrial Development Corp. at the time of the announcement. He said the consultant, Dale Martin, has over 30 years of grocery experience in the region of Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky.

The city administration, the Redevelopment Commission and JCIDC worked together to choose the consultant, who Welch said owned a grocery for years and is familiar with Madison and the surrounding area but does not live here.

The purpose of the survey that was offered to residents in December was to determine how local resident and tourists envision the future of Madison's downtown.

"Is there anything else that isn't on this list that you guys don't have?" LaPlante asked the crowd as she went through the list. A single voice cried out, "a grocery store!" Shouts, laughter, and a long applause followed.

LaPlante laughed in agreement, and turned to the next slide to meet another long applause: the most frequented business in downtown Madison, according to the survey, is Hinkle's.

LaPlante turned to the next slide, focusing on business variety. The survey suggested increase of the following in order of need: grocery store, fine dining, entertainment, a brewery, sporting goods and outdoors retail, and ethnic restaurant variety.

The survey suggested that the most frequented business hours in downtown Madison are after 5 p.m. with 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. next. Survey respondents reported they frequented the downtown area every day - though, the majority of those who took the survey lived downtown (28 percent). An additional 30 percent of individuals said they would like to live in downtown, while another 15 percent said they were unsure. LaPlante suggested this 15 percent may not be aware of affordable housing opportunities in the area.

LaPlante said most survey respondents

Sex offender's babysitter ad exposes Indiana loophole

By SCOTT MILEY and KEN DE LA BASTIDE CNHI Statehouse Bureau and Herald Bulletin

INDIANAPOLIS — For more than five years, Anthony Carmack's name and photo have been on Indiana's sex offender registry.

He was convicted in Madison County of child exploitation and possession of child pornography in 2012. His name was entered into the state's publicly accessible registry in August 2013.

Last fall, Carmack, 26, advertised services as a babysitter on an Anderson-based Facebook page, police say.

The sheriff's office in Madison County and state Sen. Frank Mrvan, D-Hammond, learned of the advertisement independently of each other and eventually discussed the need for a change in the state law.

In response, Mrvan authored Senate Bill 258, which received unanimous support Monday from the Family and Children Services Committee.

The bill would prohibit a sexually violent predator or offender from working as a babysitter or child care provider. If caught, the person could be charged with a Level 6 felony, which carries a prison sentence of six months to two-and-a-half years.

Among current restrictions, offenders can't live within 1,000 feet of a school, park or youth program center. A sexually violent offender also cannot work, either as a paid employee or a volunteer, on school property, at a youth center or a public park.

Carmack's Facebook advertisement had stunned

"It was horrible for me. Nobody knows who these people are," Mrvan said Monday. "I just felt horrible that a guy could be taking in children as a babysitter."

Madison County Sheriff Scott Mellinger said he was disturbed when he discovered the state has no prohibition against sex offenders advertising to provide child care.

"When it does happen, we want to put a stop to it," he said. "There was a loophole in Indiana law."

On Monday, Mrvan presented the committee with a letter from Kathleen Short, coordinator of the Sex Offender Registry for Madison County.

In the letter, Short said that last September she was notified by local residents that Carmack was posting on a Facebook site called "Anderson Resale and Rummage." The post listed his qualifications for a babysitting Short joined the Facebook site to encourage people to check the Sex Offender Registry. Short also spoke with Carmack, who had moved to Olney, Illinois, and she contacted the Illinois Sex Offender Registry to make officials there aware of the situation. She confirmed that Carmack had registered as a sex offender in Illinois on

Carmack reportedly said he moved to Illinois because

Bates confident of principal, interim superintendent roles

By TALI HUNT

Southwestern High School Principal Jeff Bates was officially on the job Tuesday as the school corporation's interim superintendent after board action Monday night.

Bates said the schools' board of trustees asked him to take on the additional responsibility when the former superintendent, Trevor Jones, left to head the Scott County District 1 system. He said the board and administrators are focused on finishing out the school year and continuing to put students first and he believes the board will plan to focus toward the end of the 2018-19 academic year on a search for a full-time superintendent.

Bates, a Madison native, taught for the South Ripley County School Corporation in Versailles for 17 years. Bates has been principal at Southwestern High School for 13 years. He took the position one year after starting with Southwestern Schools. During his first year working in Southwestern Schools, he was the assistant principal to the middle and high schools. The next year, the middle and high school were split into the two schools they are today and he was asked to be the high school principal.

"At the time, being a high school principal was my goal," said Bates.

Bates admitted that at that time he felt he might not have been ready to step into the principal's role but couldn't pass up the opportunity to continue growing in his career. Now, he has been asked to step up again and said he agreed to help out in whatever way he could.

"I have complete confidence that I'll be able to handle whatever situations we face," said Bates.

He joked that he had Jones' phone number saved to his speed dial, explaining that he had a good relationship with Jones, who has offered to assist Bates if he needs advice.

Bates said the transition has been smooth, crediting that fact to his co-workers in the administration office and in the high school. "I'm not going to slack off on one job to do the other," said Bates, confident he will be able to fulfill his responsibilities as principal and interim superintendent. He said he will still be available to talk with parents and the community if they have any questions or concerns, as he was before stepping once more

Indianapolis man gets 110 years in 2017 double-slaying

Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS — A man who was apprehended in Texas after fleeing charges in a double-killing has been sentenced to 110 years in prison. A Marion County judge sentenced Mingo Thames, 50, on Monday in the killings of Darrell Miller and James Clark. A jury had convicted Thames in December of two counts of murder in the fatal shootings. After the April 2017 killings, investigators tracked Thames to San Francisco before U.S. Marshals apprehended him in September 2017 in El Paso, Texas. Authorities believed Thames was traveling the country with an Imperial County, California-based church outreach group that authorities tracked to El Paso. A second defendant, Maurice Turentine, is also charged for his alleged role in the killings. Turentine's double-murder trial is scheduled to begin Feb. 25.

Legislation to tighten vet aid fund handling

INDIANAPOLIS lawmaker has filed legislation that would tighten up management of a state grant program intended for struggling veterans after revelations that a state agency awarded some of the grants to its own employees. The Indianapolis Star reports that Rep. Randy Frye's bill includes a provision that would make Indiana Department of Veterans' Affairs employees ineligible for grants from the Military Family Relief Fund. The Greensburg Republican says he's sponsoring the legislation hoping to right "some wrongs." The state Department of Veterans' Affairs' leader, James Brown, resigned last month after reports he awarded money to veterans who worked under him. He denied wrongdoing. Brown's resignation came after The Indianapolis Star and WRTV-TV questioned the agency's administration of the fund, which is supported by fees from specialty veteran license plates.

Toxicology report awaited in jail deaths

LAFAYETTE — A coroner says toxicology reports are needed on two inmates who died after falling ill in their cells at the same northern Indiana jail. Tippecanoe County Coroner Donna Avolt told the Journal & Courier Monday that "everything in these cases is going to rely on toxicology." Reports generally take four to six weeks to return from a laboratory. Sheriff Bob Goldsmith says Isaiah Powe, 42, and Bonny Ahlrich, 42, were in separate parts of the jail's holding area in Lafayette when they were

Pastor questions city's plan for armored vehicle

TERRE HAUTE — A pastor says the City of Terre Haute's plans to acquire an armored vehicle will stoke fear and anxiety among the public. Matt Larimer is an associate minister with North Terre Haute Christian Church. He's spoken out against a city board's approval of buying a Lenco BearCat armored vehicle for the city police department's strategic response team. Larimer tells the Tribune-Star the vehicle will "make it more dangerous for police in the long run in that it breaks trust and creates anxiety." Mayor Duke Bennett supports buying the BearCat. He agrees with the police chief and Vigo County's sheriff that the vehicle's purpose is to protect both officers and the public. Terre Haute police have received a state grant for the purchase of the $242,000 vehicle.

15 years in plot to poison infant

FORT WAYNE — A man has been sentenced to 15 years in prison for plotting with his girlfriend to try to poison her infant niece by adding crushed painkillers to a bottle of breast milk. An Allen County judge sentenced Sir Marshall S. Snyder III, 23, on Tuesday. The Fort Wayne man, who is also known as Marshall Snyder, pleaded guilty last month to aiding attempted aggravated battery. Authorities said Snyder and Sarai Rodriguez-Miranda, 20, plotted to kill the infant in January 2017 by lacing a bottle of breast milk with enough crushed painkillers to kill an adult and leaving the bottle in a refrigerator The Journal Gazette reported the plot was discovered and the baby wasn't harmed. Rodriguez-Miranda was sentenced to 25 years in prison after pleading guilty to attempted murder.

Police close probe into 2003 killing

FORT WAYNE - Police say they've closed the investigation into a 2003 killing after determining that a man who died of a drug overdose in 2017 is believed to be the killer. The body of Joshua Salyer, 28, was found wrapped in cardboard and plastic inside a recycling bin at a recycling center in Fort Wayne. He'd been shot. Police say a witness came forward last year who identified the alleged killer, who died at the age of

39. The killing was reportedly over a $30 debt. The suspect had a criminal record that included drug charges. Salyer's mother, Debra Argerbright, says she had hoped to face her son's killer in court one day. She noted: "Obviously, that's not going to happen."

Boil water order after fire drops pressure

WOLCOTTVILLE - Residents of a town are being told to boil their water for a few days after a large weekend fire sent water pressure plunging. The fire Saturday afternoon destroyed MC Surplus in downtown Wolcottville. Utilities Superintendent Darin Garrett tells WANE-TV the town normally pumps 80,000 to 100,000 gallons of water per day, but it pumped more than 220,000 gallons Saturday. Garrett says Wolcottville didn't run out of water, but the pressure dropped so low it seemed that way. He says that when the pressure gets that low, the town issues a boil water notice as a precaution. He says the town is sending two water samples to the Indiana Department of Environmental Management and hopes to learn Wednesday if it can lift the boil order.

Residents again seek to block new rules

FRANKFORT - Sixteen residents have again asked a federal judge to block new eligibility requirements for Medicaid. The group, led by a trio of advocacy organizations, wants a federal judge to block Republican Gov. Matt Bevin's plan that would require some Medicaid recipients to get a job, go to school or volunteer to keep their health coverage. They argue the changes will irreparably harm the country's most vulnerable residents. Bevin's plan was supposed to go into effect last July. But a judge blocked the rules from taking effect. The Bevin administration made some small changes, which the federal government approved. The new rules are scheduled to take effect in Aprıl.

UPS driver accused of stealing 68 packages

LOUISVILLE — Authorities say nearly 70 packages that never reached their intended recipients were found in the home of a UPS driver. Citing an arrest citation, news outlets report Louisville Metro police believe Jon Keen, 38, stole the 68 packages and resold some. One victim told police he ordered seven custom luxury watches that never arrived, but were later found on eBay.

Keen acknowledged owning the eBay account and selling one watch for $2,000. Keen was arrested Jan. 9 after a search of his home. Police also discovered marijuana, Xanax bars and a drug that appeared to MDMA. Another arrest report says detectives later found an undelivered package of luxury perfumes and colognes worth nearly $1,700.

Louisville Fairness Ordinance's 20th year

LOUISVILLE - A gayrights group says it's planning an event to mark the 20th anniversary of Louisville's Fairness Ordinance. The Fairness Campaign says its celebration will be Jan. 26 at the main branch of the Louisville Free Public Library. It says the event at 6 p.m. will include an exhibit opening, reception and discussion to include former Louisville Board of Aldermen members from 20 years ago. The group says that on Jan. 26, 1999, the city's aldermen approved the LGBTQ anti-discrimination ordinance. Many of the original supporters of the Fairness Ordinance will share their memories with the crowd on Jan. 26. The commemoration will continue through March 17 with an exhibit celebrating the Fairness Ordinance's 20th anniversary. The exhibit will be at the city library's main branch.

First coal mining death of 2019

MIDDLESBORO - An underground shuttle car has struck and killed a 56-year-old coal miner. Jeffery Norman Sloan, of Clifton, Tennessee, was hit around 11:20 a.m. Monday morning at Tennco Energy's Toms Fork mine in Bell County in southeastern Kentucky. It was Kentucky's first coal mining death of 2019 and the second nationally. Kentucky recorded just one coal mining death last year, in March. Sloan had worked in coal mines for 30 years. He was taken to Pineville Hospital where he was pronounced dead. The Kentucky Energy and Environment Cabinet said in a news release that mining operations were halted after the death and will remain suspended during an investigation. The state Division of Mine Safety sent investigators to the scene.

Teen pleads guilty to killing stepmother

DANVILLE - A teenager faces a recommended 15-year sentence for killing her stepmother and stealing her car. News outlets report 17-year-old Jenna Oakley pleaded guilty Monday in Boyle Circuit Court to first-degree manslaughter in the death of Rhonda Oakley, 52. Prosecutor Richie Bottoms said the charge was amended down from murder. She also pleaded guilty to theft. Rhonda Oakley's body was found Sept. 1, 2016 in her Danville home by her 13-year-old son. Jenna Oakley was found two days later with the car in New Mexico. Her lawyer pushed unsuccessfully to move her case back into juvenile court. Now her sentencing is set for Feb. 22. The victim's husband and teen's father, Phillip Oakley, said he thinks her recommended sentence is too short.

Distillery worker dies after fall from walkway

OWENSBORO — Authorities say a distillery employee died after falling from a suspended walkway at the facility. The Daviess County coroner's office said Tuesday that an autopsy revealed 44-year-old Dennis Layman of Owensboro died of blunt force trauma after falling at Glenmore Distillery in Owensboro. An autopsy was done since the death was work-related. Operations at the Sazerac-owned facility were suspended after the employee's death Monday pending an investigation. State Labor Cabinet spokeswoman Susan West says state investigators were dispatched to the distillery but she declined further comment, saying the investigation is continuing. West says there were no distillery work-related deaths reported in Kentucky in 2018. Sazerac spokeswoman Amy Preske says Layman had worked at the distillery since

Books on courage, hope and imagination

Children can learn a great deal about courage, hope and imagination by reading the right books. If you think about it, courage, hope and imagination are intertwined. When we're called upon to gather our courage, we must first imagine we'll succeed. And the root of our imagination and courage is hope. We don't enter into any situation, good, bad or otherwise, without a sense of hope that things will turn out as we desire. If things don't turn out the way we wanted, we must call upon our courage once again to honestly evaluate what happened to cause the result and imagine another course of action with the hope the results will be better the next time.

That's the theme you'll find in the books reviewed today. We all need great measures of courage, hope and an active, healthy imagination to successfully plot our course through life. Let these and other books become a child's helper along the way. That's good stuff, whichever way you look at it.

Bursting with beautifully colorful illustrations and uplifting, positive words, Tomorrow I'll Be Brave encourages young children to be adventurous, strong, smart, curious, creative, confident and brave, but with a new twist. Rather than focusing on the present, it suggests all of these traits for tomorrow, and that if one or all of these things aren't accomplished tomorrow, that's okay – just try your best.

A story of possibilities, thinking outside of the box, the courage to try new things and seize life to the fullest, this book is a true gem.

"The Real Boat" by Marina Aromshtam, illustrated by

Victoria Semykina, templar books, 2019, 64 pages, $17.99 hardcover

Read aloud: age 5 - 8. Read yourself: age 7 - 8.

A small paper boat is sailing in a pond, feeling quite happy. Suddenly the paper boat hears about a much larger body of water - the largest of all - the ocean. There, boats of all kinds sail and motor, and the paper boat decides he must go there too, for then he will become a real boat.

Following a stream, the paper boat sails along, making friends as he travels and getting advice on how to reach the ocean. Once he finally arrives, he is in awe of the ocean's magnificence, but soon learns that the ocean can be dangerous as well. What will become of the little paper boat?

A wonderful tale of courage, hope and imagination, The Real Boat is a feast for the eyes with its magnificent illustrations that perfectly complement this magical journey that will capture the hearts of young and old alike.

Holiday spending for the extended family

this week. The following column was originally published in Octo-

Dear Annie: Christmas used to be a time that I enjoyed. I have always enjoyed spending time with siblings and cousins who live in other cities and catching up with them. Over the years, our families have grown. Our older children have grown, and they have children of their own. Some of the younger kids have significant others who always join in with the family celebrations.

My family's gift-giving tradition is that we have a Kriss Kringle type of exchange for the adults and we all buy gifts for the children. In my case, I need to buy gifts for nearly 20 children/spouses/significant others. I am on a limited budget and honestly cannot afford to buy gifts for everyone, yet I still do because I am reluctant to say anything about it. After all, Christmas only happens once a year, and I don't want to appear to be a Scrooge.

Summer is barely over, and I am already dreading December. I would love to get through out getting into a lot of debt. Any ideas would be much appreciated. Broke but Still Spending season with-wallet hurts just reading this. It's wonderful your family members are all so generous and appreciate the joy of gift giving, but Christmas shouldn't put you under an avalanche of

I have a feeling you're not the only one in your family who feels this way, so try talking to your siblings and cousins. You mentioned that some of the younger kids bring significant others. If they're old enough to be dating, they're old enough to get a gift for a relative. You could include them in the secret Santa. That way, everyone spends less money and can spend more time picking out one thoughtful

If your family is resistant to changing up the tradition, you can at least work on simplifying the process and reducing the cost for yourself. One option is to pick a uniform gift, one you give to everyone. For instance, you might have everyone send you a favorite dessert recipe, after which you compile them into a family cookbook with photos and attribution and print out booklets. You'll be giving people a gift that's unique to your family and that they can use for years to come.

Dear Annie: This is about the person who wrote about a social group that has potlucks where one member always takes more than his share, getting in line first, loading his plate, gobbling up his food and then getting in line again. Then he makes sure he's at the end of the line after everyone else is done, getting another plate so he can finish up what's left. (I assume he's the only one who gets seconds and thirds.) The folks have asked him nicely on several occasions to not go back for more until everyone has had a chance to get a plate, but he doesn't listen.

I would tell the rest of the group to give him one more chance. Then I would tell him that if he continues his rude behavior, he will be excluded from the group. Unless he has a lot of other redeeming qualities that make him socially desirable, I can't think of why they would put up with his rude and gluttonous behavior.

That's just my take. I am a senior citizen, and I may not be so tolerant of rude behavior as younger people.

ORAL IMMUNOTHERAPY SHOWS PROMISE IN TREATING PEANUT ALLERGIES

Dear Doctor: My 5-year-old nephew has a severe peanut allergy. It's so bad that he can't risk eating anything that isn't prepared by the family. Even the highly supervised snack time at school isn't safe. Now I've read about a new peanut allergy drug that is an oral immunotherapy. How does it work? Do you think it could help him? Dear Reader: We are parents as well as physicians, so we understand the nonstop vigilance that comes with a food allergy. But peanuts are common enough that, despite a family's best efforts, it's likely a child with a peanut allergy will come into contact with them at some point. That's why the potential of the new immunotherapy drug you mentioned is so exciting. Not only does it offer people with peanut allergies a new measure of protection, it opens up a range of possibilities for future allergy therapies. The new drug, currently known as AR101, is under review by the Food and Drug Administration. This follows the completion of a series of clinical trials in the efficacy and safety of the drug. AR101 works by very gradually exposing an individual to peanut proteins, which desensitizes the immune system. This takes place over the course of six months, during which the peanut content in the daily oral dose is methodically increased. At the end of a year -- six months of treatment followed by six months of maintenance -- 67 percent of the children in the study were able to safely eat two peanuts. Researchers have made it clear that the goal is not to cure the allergy, but to reduce the severity of symptoms should accidental exposure to peanuts ever

Unfortunately, the drug didn't work for everyone. More than 10 percent of the participants exited the study before it was complete due to adverse reactions. Of those who remained, 14 percent required intervention with epinephrine, which eases symptoms. The bad news for adults living with a peanut allergy is that the treatment was not effective in those adults who were enrolled in the clinical trials.

For those who aren't aware, peanut allergy is one of the most common causes of severe allergy attacks in children. A reaction can be triggered by even a tiny amount of the legume, and symptoms range from mild to severe. They include runny nose, itching or tingling in the mouth and throat, hives or other skin reactions, gastric distress like nausea, vomiting or diarrhea, and respiratory issues like wheezing, shortness of breath or a tightening of the throat. At its most severe, a peanut allergy can cause anaphylaxis, a life-threatening reaction that is causing an increasing number of hospitalizations. Symptoms include swollen airways that prevent breathing, a precipitous drop in blood pressure and loss of consciousness.

A challenge of the treatment is that after receiving each daily dose of the medication, children have to rest for two hours but cannot sleep during that time. Still, physicians and researchers are buoyed by the results. AR101 has been flagged by the FDA as a breakthrough therapy, which makes it eligible for a swift approval process. If all goes well, the manufacturer reports that the drug could be available by the end of 2019.

Card-perfect defense is not common

By Phillip Alder

Primo Levi, the Italian chemist who authored two books about his experiences as a concentration camp survivor, wrote, "The aims of life are the best defense against death.

At the bridge table, the best defense can often turn a minus score into a plus. This deal featured one of the runners-up for the best defense of 2016-17. It occurred during the final of the world senior teams in Lyon, France. It featured Allan Graves (East) and Michael Becker. The original article was written by John Carruthers, the Canadian editor of the International Bridge Press Association's monthly

Both teams, Italy and the United States, were in four spades by South. At the other table, West led the heart queen because East had opened with a weak two-bid. After this Stayman auction, Becker still found that start, knowing that short strong suits often make good leads against suit contracts. The declarers took the trick and drew two rounds of trumps ending in hand to get that bad news Each now led the club 10.

At the other table, the Italian West played low, and the contract could no longer be defeated. In contrast, Becker won with his ace and continued with the heart jack. Graves overtook with his king and continued with the heart eight. When declarer ruffed high, Becker discarded the club seven (high from a remaining doubleton).

South had to persevere with the club queen, but Graves took the trick and gave his partner a club ruff. Plus 420 and plus 50 gave the United States 10 international match points

'Hello, Dolly!' icon Carol Channing mourned

By MARK KENNEDY

NEW YORK (AP) — Broadway theaters will dim their lights to honor the death of Carol Channing, the three-time Tony Award-winning ebullient musical comedy star who delighted American audiences over 5,000 performances as the scheming Dolly Levi in "Hello, Dolly!" on Broadway and beyond. She Publicist B. Harlan Boll said Channing died of natural causes at 12:31 a.m. Tuesday in Rancho Mirage, California. Boll says she had twice suffered strokes in the last year.

Besides "Hello, Dolly!," Channing starred in other Broadway shows, but none with equal magnetism. She often appeared on television and in nightclubs, for a time partnering with George Burns in Las Vegas and a national tour.

Over the years, Channing continued as Dolly in national tours, the last in 1996, when she was in her 70s.

Broadway will pause on Wednesday to honor Channing by dimming all theater marquees for a minute at 7:45 p.m.

Details of lawmaker plans to curb virtual charter schools

Chalkbeat Indiana

chalkbeat.org Indiana lawmakers are proposing new bills to address what they view as shortcomings of virtual charter schools, a year after three attempts

The bills, filed in recent days, tackle several aspects of virtual schools that have drawn criticism: how new students are onboarded who oversees the schools, and how quickly they are growing.

to create restrictions went

The proposals stem from recommendations made by the Indiana State Board of Education's virtual school review committee, which has met over the past year to come up with solutions to some of the schools' most pressing problems, including low test scores and graduation rates, a lack of student and parent participation, and the need to improve their oversight.

The bills vary widely in their ramifications for virtual schools and will face different amounts of resistance from virtual school leaders. A bill authored by Rep. Bob Behning, an Indianapolis Republican who chairs the House Education Committee, would add a requirement that schools and policymakers alike widely agree on: mandatory orientations for virtual school students and parents before students enroll so they understand how virtual education works and what is expected of them.

Behning said student and parent engagement is essential at the schools, which enroll students from across the state who work remotely. About 13.000 students attend virtual charter schools in Indiana.

"If you don't have an engaged adult, there's no way you're going to have any success," he said. "If a kid doesn't turn on a computer, there's no way we can have online instruction."

Virtual school leaders said in state board of education committee hearings last year that they supported a move to require orientations for students and parents.

"We're convenient for a lot of families that need a flexible learning environment, but we can't just be a place where a kid lands because he or she doesn't want to go to a physical classroom or because they think they just hide and do nothing," Melissa Brown, head of schools for Indiana Connections Academy, told Chalkbeat in July.

Schools can — and many do already hold orientations for new students and parents. Behning's bill would make them a condition of enrollment. If students don't complete them, the virtual charter schools can keep them from enrolling. A similar requirement in the bill for virtual schools within school districts does not have the same consequence

The bill would also allow the state board to create regulations for virtual schools within school districts, including ones on orientations, staff training, student engagement and counseling, and tracking attendance. Behning said he also intends to amend the bill to include provisions that would no longer allow school districts to be statewide charter school authorizers — a loophole in the state's current law. It was an oversight that the measure was not included in the initial bill, he said.

A proposal by Sen. Jeff Raatz, R-Centerville, the new Senate education committee chairman, would put limits on how quickly a virtual school could grow, prevent a chronically failing virtual charter school from taking new students, and reduce a financial incentive for authorizers to oversee big virtual charter

Raatz's bill could also potentially take steps toward having the state board of education intervene at the troubled Indiana Virtual School by taking away the authority of its oversight agency, Daleville schools. Education leaders have raised concerns about the small district's ability to oversee a statewide virtual charter

Sen. Eddie Melton, a Democrat from Merrillville, authored a bill that would make dramatic changes to how the schools are run and overseen — and could face a tough road to passage. The bill would create one statewide authorizer — the Indiana Charter School Board to take responsibility for the schools, as opposed to numerous smaller authorizers. As a statewide authorizer, the state charter board would be expected to monitor each school and its charter agreement. It's unlikely this provision will gain favor with Republicans, and Melton told Chalkbeat that he might consider getting rid of it. The suggestion of a single virtual charter school authorizer was introduced by the state board committee in an early draft of its legislative recommendations, but the full board voted to nix the idea after some board members said they were concerned it would limit school choice.

ensure it is meeting the goals in

Behning, too, has said he doesn't support a single authorizer, though he said he wouldn't rule out hearing the bill if it made it to his com-

In a December state board meeting, Percy Clark, superintendent of Indiana Virtual School said a single authorizer would discourage innovation.

"The recommendation to make the authorizer uniform ing funding to 90 percent for contradicts the mission of the charter movement, defeating any possibility of innovation and uniqueness," Clark said. "This recommendation takes our state down the path of blandness, a boring future, a one-size fits all mentality."

Melton's bill would also set a strict enrollment cap for virtual charter schools of no more than 1,200 students per year. Most of the state's five full-time virtual charter schools enroll between 2.000 and 5.000 students each. Melton's is the only bill that places more financial reporting requirements on the schools, asking them to report to the state their projected costs-per-student each year. If the state board determines their costs are lower than what they receive from the state, they can reduce the schools' funding accordingly.

Now, the schools receive 90 percent of the state funding that traditional schools receive, and virtual school critics have said that might still be too high given that the school's have fewer overhead costs. Although Senate Republicans have in the past moved to keep virtual school funding at 90 percent, House Republicans have requested upping it to 100 percent, arguing that all students should be funded at the same level regardless of school type.

Raatz's bill suggests reduc-schools where students receive 15 percent or more of their instruction online

A 2017 Chalkbeat investigation of Indiana Virtual School revealed widespread low performance and questionable business and spending practices, setting off a statewide conversation about how the schools are serving students and what regulations need to be added. But Indiana Republicans were hesitant to acknowledge or act on the issue. Last year, three bills that would have added more oversight for virtual charter schools were introduced, but none were heard in committees. In December, Gov. Eric Holcomb called for state education leaders to review the schools, echoing earlier statements encouraging Indiana to prioritize improving them.

Melton said in a news conference last week that virtual charter schools in the state "are suffering" and are "not participating or giving back" as the state originally might have planned. He went as far as suggesting that the money spent on virtual charter schools might be better spent on teacher pay raises, a hot topic during this year's legislative session.

Pence tested in role of messenger for Trump policies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Progress made, said one.

Not so, said the other.

We'll meet again, said one.

Waste of time, said the other. Such has been the life lately of Mike Pence, the loyal soldier dispatched by President Donald Trump to lead negotiations over the partial government shutdown.

The vice president has been one of the administration's most visible emissaries during the shutdown fight, meeting with lawmakers, sitting for interviews and leading staff-level talks. But he's been repeatedly - and very publicly — undermined and contradicted by his boss, who's demanding billions from Congress to build a wall along the southern border.

Lawmakers and aides parties say it's become increasingly clear that, in this White House, no one speaks for the president but himself, leaving Pence in an all-but-impossible position as he tries to negotiate on Trump's behalf.

"He doesn't really have the authority to make a deal," said Republican Rep. Mike Simpson of Idaho, who worked alongside Pence back when Pence was a member of Congress. He said legislators respect the vice president even if he is just "the messenger." But he adds: "Trump is the one who's going to say 'yes' or Even before the shutdown began, Pence was in an awkward spot in the wall debate — quite literally. When Trump hosted then-incoming House Speaker Nancy Pelosi and Senate Democratic leader Chuck Schumer at a heated Oval Office meeting in December that ended with the president saying he'd be "proud" to own a government shutdown, a stone-faced Pence sat by, speechless in his chair, drawing quips on social media comparing him to a statue or the "Elf on the Shelf."

Trump later sent Pence to lead a weekend of budget talks with staff for Republican and Democratic congressional leaders, an effort that Democrats dismissed as little more than a public-relations effort by the White House to give the impression it was working to end the impasse. Some also saw Pence's meetings with legislative staffers as unbefitting of his title.

When the first negotiation session ended that Saturday, Pence tweeted: "Productive discussion."

An hour later, Trump countered: "Not much headway made.'

The next morning, as Pence was set to return to the negotiating table, Trump again threw cold water on the effort.

"I don't expect to have anything happen at that meeting ... nor does the vice president,' Trump told reporters. "Ultimately, it's going to be solved by the principals."

Allies of the vice president minimized the significance of the comments and the White House denied any friction.

"The vice president has been very effective in communicating on behalf of the administration," said White House spokeswoman Sarah Huckabee Sanders. "He has been in lock step with the president throughout the entire process."

Pence, too, rejected the idea that he'd been undermined by the president or had difficulty building trust on Capitol Hill because of Trump's tendency to change his mind.

He described to reporters an offer he brought to Schumer from the president on the Saturday before Christmas to try to cut a deal.

"I didn't have any impression that whole week that they doubted that it was a legitimate offer," said Pence. He would not confirm the details, but it was understood to have lowered the president's demand for $5.7 billion to build the wall to $2.5 billion.

Democrats panned the offer. Days later, Trump rejected it, too,

"No, not 2.5," Trump told reporters. "We're asking for 5.6. And, you know, somebody said 2.5. No."

With negotiations now at a standstill, Pence has been a frequent visitor to the Capitol, focused on trying to keep jittery Republicans from breaking with Trump.

The vice president is well known in Congress, having climbed the ladder as the leader of a conservative faction to serve as chairman of the House GOP conference before running for governor of Indiana. That background was among the reasons Trump, who arrived in Washington with no government experience, chose Pence as his running mate.

Marc Lotter, a former Pence spokesman who remains an outside adviser, said Pence "often gets called in if we're getting close to the finish line to see if we can bring in a couple of last votes" or hold onto those who may be wavering. He recalled Pence, during a health care fight, "working back and forth, taking ideas and trying to find areas where there could be agreement, looking for areas where there could be compromise"

While Pence lacks the personal relationships with Schumer and Pelosi that some of his predecessors had with opposition leaders— notably Vice President Joe Biden's relationship with Senate Republicans — Lotter said Pence meets regularly with members of both parties and both chambers, hosting lawmakers at his residence for regular dinners.

Marc Short, the former White House director of legislative affairs who previously served as Pence's chief of staff, said the vice president's measured manner has been a "complement" to Trump's very different style.

He pointed to efforts during the "Obamacare" repeal effort thinks," said Sen. John Kenneto sway Sen. Susan Collins, R-Maine, known for taking her time to weigh decisions. Pence worked patiently to answer her questions. Indeed, "listener" was a word that came up often when lawmakers were asked to describe Pence. "He's a good listener," said

Sen. Rob Portman, R-Ohio. 'Which is a rare quality around

"He tells us exactly what he dy, R-La. "He's a good listener. He takes our messages back to the president."

But Simpson questioned whether that's what is needed.

Pence, said the Idaho Republican, is "a relayer. We need to have a negotiator ... someone who has the authority to go in and negotiate. And then someone who has the ability to go to Trump and say this is the best we can do."

High drama, few results in 25th day

Staring down the next deadline refusing money for the wall to pay federal workers, the White House shifted tactics Tuesday, trying to bypass House Speaker Nancy Pelosi to negotiate with rank-and-file lawmakers even as President Donald Trump dug in for a prolonged shutdown.

The House and Senate announced they would stay in session, canceling an upcoming recess week at home if the shutdown continued, which seemed likely. On the shutdown's 25th day, Trump did not move off his demand to have Congress provide $5.7 billion to build his promised border wall with Mexico. Democrats say they will discuss border security once the government

WASHINGTON (AP) - has reopened, but Pelosi is they view as ineffective and immoral.

The president, on a conference call with supporters, showed no signs of backing

"We're going to stay out for a long time, if we have to," Trump said. "We'll be out for a long time."

With some 800,000 federal employees furloughed or working without pay, Trump suggested the partial shutdown that has clogged airport security lines and shuttered federal agencies was going smoothly.

"People are very impressed with how well government is working with the circumstances that we're under," Trump said.

Short wrote to lawmakers: "In my personal and professional opinion, if our society values our children as much as we say we do, then SB 258 prohibiting convicted sex offenders, and those with sexually violent histories, from working as child care providers should absolutely pass unopposed."

The pornography and exploitation case against Carmack, then 18, began in late 2010 when a state police investigator received six cyber tip reports from the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children that indicated Carmack either possessed or distributed child pornography.

On Nov. 23, 2010, investigators were given permission by Carmack's mother to look at his computer, and a search warrant was later obtained so they could do a full forensic search of the hard drive.

A preliminary search found

869 images, including 270 of prepubescent children - all but a few were of boys. The next day, investigators interviewed Carmack at his home, and he confessed to possessing and distributing child pornography.

Carmack told officers he was a student at Anderson High half the day, a volunteer at Goodwill Industries and worked two days a week at Pay Less Super Market. At the time, Carmack's mother told officers her son was a special education student.

Carmack was initially sentenced to six years, with three suspended, for child exploitation and three years, all suspended, for possession of child pornography. He was to be admitted to a mental health program, but none would accept him because of an extensive juvenile criminal record, according to court records.

After charges of probation violation, he was released from prison in November 2017.

were in the 50 to 55 age range, with the rest falling at either side of this age range — 45 to 50 and 55 to 60. Not many millenials filled out the survey, LaPlante said, though, the Madison Main Street program did discuss the possibility of changing Main Street's marketing strategy from the words, "arts and antiques" to "arts and vintage" to attract more of the millenial population to the area, particularly those in town for a day visit.

The consensus? Madison's Main Street program will be working toward changes to improve the downtown environment for active retirees, the highest percentage of the population in the area. Among the improvements being considered are improved lighting, accessible stores for the disabled, an assessment of transportation needs to and from the downtown area, walking clubs, and a suggested move to expand sidewalks while removing two lanes from Main Street to cater to pedestrians rather than vehicle traffic. Some in the crowd voiced concerns about the two-lane suggestion, which prompted LaPlante to offer that a small town in New Hampshire had made a similar move that did not affect the flow of traffic and had been a benefit to the town.

Other concerns for the downtown area voiced during the meeting Monday evening were "what sounds like drag racing" on Vaughn Drive, loud motorcycles, heavy dump truck and semi activity downtown, the inability to talk outside on Main Street because of the noise, the need for an increase in neighborhood watches in the evening hours, and the need for stores to stay open later.

The website for Madison's Main Street Program says it "is an arm of Indiana Main Street and a member of the National Trust for Historic Preservation's Main Street Center and is one of over 1,200 Main Street communities across the country united with the common goal of preserving America's historic downtowns as economically vibrant parts

Colts fire O-line coach

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Indianapolis Colts announced they have dismissed offensive line coach Dave DeGuglielmo and confirmed assistant offensive line coach Bobby Johnson has been hired by the Buffalo Bills.

No reason was cited for the firing. DeGuglielmo and Johnson helped a young, revamped line make a dramatic turnaround. One season after allowing a league-high 56 sacks, the line cut the number to a league-low 18. It also cleared the way for Marlon Mack to rush for 100-plus yards in five games the highest single-season total by a Colts running back since Joseph Addai in 2007.

DeGuglielmo was one of three coaches initially hired by Josh McDaniels last January. Frank Reich retained DeGuglielmo after McDaniels changed his mind and returned to New England.

Bucks sign Bonzie Colson

MILWAUKEE (AP) - The Milwaukee Bucks signed forward Bonzie Colson to a two-way contract Tuesday.

The 6-foot-5 forward has spent the 2018-19 season with the Canton Charge of the NBA G League after going undrafted in last year's draft out of Notre Dame. In 23 games with the Charge, Colson averaged 15.5 points, 7.7 rebounds, 1.6 assists and 1.5 blocks in 28.9 minutes per game. He also shot 49.1 percent from the field and 38.5 percent from 3-point range.

The 23-year-old Colson played in 125 games (92 starts) with Notre Dame over four seasons.

Wimbush joins Central Fla.

SOUTH BEND (AP) — Former Notre Dame quarterback Brandon Wimbush says he is transferring to Central Florida, where he will be eligible to play next season as a graduate transfer.

Wimbush announced on social media Monday he would attend UCF next season. He started 16 games for the Fighting Irish over the last two seasons, including the first three of 2018. Wimbush lost his starting job to Ian Book, but helped the Irish to a 12-0 regular season. Wimbush passed for 2,606 yards and 20 touchdowns and ran for 1,155 yards and 16 scores at Notre Dame.

UCF quarterback McKenzie Milton suffered a severe leg injury in the regular-season finale last year and his return to football is uncertain. Darriel Mack Jr. stepped in for Milton and led the Knights to a conference championship.

Day adds to Buckeyes' staff

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — New Ohio State coach Ryan Day has hired a second assistant away from rival Michigan.

The university said Tuesday that Day hired Michigan linebackers coach Al Washington for the same position on the Ohio State staff. The move comes a day after Michigan defensive line coach Greg Mattison was added to the staff as co-defensive coordinator.

Day will part ways with Bill Davis, who was the linebackers coach under Urban Meyer last

The 34-year-old Washington is a Columbus native whose father played linebacker for the Buckeyes. Washington and Day were assistants on the Boston College staff from 2012 to 2014.

Washington was defensive line coach on Luke Fickell's Cincinnati staff in 2017 before jumping to Michigan.

Austin to get MLS team

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — After a long and often rocky courtship, Austin and Major League Soccer became a match.

The league formally welcomed Austin as its 27th franchise with a raucous downtown party Tuesday full of chanting and flag-waving, and Commissioner Don Garber calling the Texas capital a "perfect fit." MLS said Austin will begin play in the 2021 season.

"We think of us being a league for a new America," Garber said. "Austin is diverse. It has enormous energy. It has people who really believe in the city. ... We need to be here."

The move has been long expected as Austin became the target destination for efforts last year to move the Columbus Crew. The Crew instead will stay in Ohio under a new ownership group.

By DAVID CAMPBELL Courier Staff Writer

dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

Jade Nutley rescued Madison from a near meltdown, scoring 13 points in the fourth quarter and six in the final minute to lift the Lady Cubs to a 57-52 upset win over Scottsburg on Tuesday at Salm Gym.

Nutley, Madison's 6-foot-1 sophomore forward, came to the rescue just when her teammates needed her the most. The Cubs led by 10 (45-35) with five and a half minutes to play but later trailed 52-51 after a Kady Clancy basket with 1:15 left in the game.

But Nutley, who had punished Scottsburg inside all night, took over in the final minute, drawing three fouls and sinking all six of her free-throws to push Madison back on top.

Nutley's scoring — coupled with huge steals by Jessie Dyer and Paige Young on Scottsburg's final two possessions — proved to be the difference in what was Madison's biggest win of the season to date.

"There was a little lull there (in the fourth) where I was not happy with our play. We had some turnovers that we didn't need to have. That's still some growing pains that we need to get through," Madison coach Sonja Bowyer said. "But I thought tonight we finally bounced back from those growing pains and was able to get the job done and hit some key free throws at the end."

While Madison (7-12) has played around with a 3-2 zone over the past few games, Bowyer decided that Tuesday's contest against the rival Warriorettes was the perfect game to go all-in with that defense and she wasn't disappointed.

Playing the zone nearly the entire 32 minutes, Madison throttled the high-octane Scottsburg offense at all points.

at halftime. "Our kids implemented the scout report and played with a lot of energy," Boggs said of the first half. "We hang our hat on our defense and I felt like we ultimately were able to use that and then get some scores on the other end.

It's something that we are focused on." Lexi Lay's 3-pointer made the game 20-13 with 6:43 left in the third quarter but Jac-Cen-Del's locker room adjustments started to take over.

Finally able to gain some leverage with their height advantage, the Eagles put Day, Ledford and Anna Hubbard in the post which produced 13 points in the period.

On the other end, Jac-Cen-Del used the three players to extend the defensive pressure out to the midcourt stripe, not allowing many of the same looks Switzerland County used to its advantage in the first half.

The combination allowed Jac-Cen-Del an 11-2 run to regain the lead and take a two-point lead into the fourth quarter.

"They're (Jac-Cen-Del) a tough matchup for us with their size," Boggs noted. "Their length causes a lot of concern and they've got some tall kids that we have to go up against on both ends and those same kids can handle the ball too. I thought we played well in the middle but they're not a 15-win team for nothing. My hats off to them and Coach (Scott) Smith."

Ledford and Day pushed the lead out to 37-29 with 5:22 left in the game but the Pacers showed resiliency in sticking with the game plan. In the process, they got themselves back in contention.

After early struggles from the freethrow line — 1-of-8 in the first half as a team — Thomas broke through with four made freebies cutting the deficit to four and later nailed two more charity tosses to get the Pacers to within three points but Jac-Cen-Del responded on two occasions and led 48-44 with seconds remaining.

Lay buried a trifecta that cut the deficit to 48-47 but unable to pull off a steal on the inbounds pass, time thwarted a game-winning opportunity and the Pacers fouled with two-tenths of a second left. Annabelle Williams hit 1-of-2 from the free-throw line and

SPORTS/CLASSIFIEDS The Madison Courier, Madison, Indiana Wednesday, January 16, 2019 · B3 Hagans silences Georgia crowd, lifts No. 12 UK, 69-49

By PAUL NEWBERRY AP Sports Writer

ATHENS, Ga. - Ashton Hagans knew he was going to get booed returning to his home state.

It sure didn't seem to bother him.

With the crowd jeering each time he touched the ball, Hagans scored 23 points in a brilliant all-around performance that led No. 12 Kentucky to a 69-49 rout of Georgia on Tuesday night.

Hagans, a freshman point guard, initially committed to Georgia while still in high school but wound up signing with Kentucky.

That change of heart largely the result of a coaching change by the Bulldogs made Hagans a convenient villain for the sellout crowd at Stegeman Coliseum.

"When I heard the crowd booing me, it was just like, 'Let me just go out here and put on a show," he said. "I'm at home. I played good in front of the loving how I'm playing these home crowd, even though I was getting booed. But other than that, I had my family here. I'm just happy they saw me play."

Hagans reached double figures for the fifth game in a row and eclipsed his previous high, 18 points a week ago against Texas A&M. But the youngster's contribution went much deeper on the stat sheet — he also had five rebounds, four assists and four steals for the Wildcats (13-3, 3-1 Southeastern Conference).

Hagans was still piling up numbers an hour after the game. After reviewing the game video, Georgia officials gave him credit for a steal initially credited to Tyler Herro.

"Coach put me in a role. He let me have the ball more. He let me find the open guys," Hagans said. "I'm just going back to playing my game like I did in high school: finding my shooter, attacking the basket, looking for my bigs. I'm just past couple of games. I've got to keep it going.

Hagans seemed to be pressing a bit in the early going, missing his first four shots. After that, he was pretty much unstoppable. "It rattled him early," coach John Calipari said of the booing. "It inspired him later."

First-year Georgia coach Tom Crean, who took over after Mark Fox was fired, tried to persuade Hagans to fulfill his initial commitment to the Bulldogs.

Crean really wishes he had him now.

'We're not tough enough on the ball," the coach said. 'We're not aggressive enough, nasty enough defending it."

With Hagans wearing blue instead of red, Georgia was left with senior Turtle Jackson starting at the point. He managed only two points on 1-of-8 shooting for Georgia (9-7, 1-3).

"We've just got to learn from this, come out with a different mindset and just keep pushing," Jackson said.

The Bulldogs led by five in the opening minutes before going to the locker room down 35-31.

Hagans took control after halftime, leading Kentucky to its third straight victory. He knocked down a 3-pointer just ahead of the shot-clock buzzer, darted into the lane to scoop one in, and took off on another layup set up by his own steal — the one initially given to Herro. Just like that. Kentucky pushed the lead into double figures, 42-31.

It was no contest after that.

In the closing minutes, as most of the red-clad fans headed for the exits, a sizeable contingent of Wildcat fans chanted, "Go Big Blue!"

Nicolas Claxton led Georgia with 12 points. The Bulldogs shot only 30 percent (17 of 56) from the field.

DUNKFEST

Georgia's first five baskets were dunks.

After some defensive adjustments and better communication, Kentucky tightened things down at defensive end.

"I'm thinking, 'Is this going to be a 100-point game?" Calipari said. "When one guy breaks down, you're going to struggle. When two guys break down, they're going to get five straight dunks."

HOMECOMING

Hagans played his high school ball about an hour's drive from Athens.

The freshman initially backed off his commitment to Georgia last February when it became apparent that Fox's job could be in jeopardy.

Indeed, Fox was fired after the season and replaced by Crean.

Even though he signed with Kentucky, Hagans conceded that he's still a Georgia football

BIG PICTURE

Kentucky: Hagans is really taking control of the Wildcats after playing limited minutes early in the season. He is averaging 15.8 points over the last five games, a huge jump from his 3.8 average in the first 11

"I'm proud of him," Calipari said. "The way it started early on, we were still figuring each other out. He wasn't playing much, averaging three points a game. People were like, 'Transfer?' No! It's a process.'

Georgia: The Bulldogs still have a lot of work to do, especially in the backcourt. The other starting guard, Teshaun Hightower, had only five

Edwards leads Purdue over Rutgers 89-54 his back to the basket, so that

By JIM JOHNSON Associated Press

WEST LAFAYETTE -Carsen Edwards continues to cause fits for opponents and few have found a way to con-

The junior guard scored 13 of his 19 points in the first half, and finished with six assists and five rebounds to lead Purdue to an 89-54 win over Rutgers on Tuesday night.

"He's a tough stop," Rutgers coach Steve Pikiell said. "I actually watched all the tapes and no one has been able to stop him. He plays with tremendous confidence and can make tough shots."

Edwards was 5 of 10 on 3-pointers and tied Chad Austin for sixth on Purdue's alltime list for 3-pointers made (212).

Trevion Williams had 16 points and 13 rebounds and Sasha Stefanovic added a career-high 14 points for the Boilermakers (11-6, 4-2 Big Ten Conference) who have won five of their last six.

Montez Mathis scored 19 points, Shaq Carter had 10 points and seven rebounds and

Geo Baker had 10 points and five rebounds as the Scarlet Knights (8-8, 1-5) played their second straight game without leading scorer and rebounder Eugene Omoruyi. He was out again with a knee injury suffered against Ohio State last

After a 9-0 run before halftime, Purdue scored nine straight points — two 3-pointers by Ryan Cline and another by Edwards — early in the second half to pull away for

"The ability to get into transition whether it was turning them over or getting rebounds, I think really helped us get some good looks, not only at the rim but also some 3s," Purdue coach Matt Painter said. "We talked about in the first five minutes of the second half about just making it hard on them, try to make it hard on Geo Baker and just doubling their big guys, not let them get easy ones or putbacks."

Cline's 3-pointer with 17:48 remaining put the Boilermakers ahead 49-32, but Purdue led by as many as 40 (83-43) when Aaron Wheeler made two free throws with 4:51 to play.

Mathis scored late in the first half to cut Purdue's lead to 31-27, but the Boilers scored nine straight and led 40-27 after a steal and fast-break layup by Edwards with 48 seconds remaining in the half.

Purdue led Rutgers 40-30 at Cline finished with 12 points going 4 of 6 from 3-point range and passed Cuonzo Martin for eighth on Purdue's all-time list for 3s made (180).

KEY STAT

The Boilermakers were 14 of 28 from 3-point range and tied their season-high for 3s made.

"If you're going to shoot well and go 14-28 from 3, it's going to be a good night," Painter

FRESHMAN STANDOUT

Williams continues to come through for the Boilermakers in a big way and it's not going unnoticed.

"I feel like (he) is able to play more with his back to the basket," Edwards said. "We're able to throw it inside to him and kind of space out and be ready to shoot. And he can pass the ball really well, especially with gives us that inside dimension. We can play inside to out and that helps a lot."

BIG PICTURE

Rutgers: A week after stunning a ranked Ohio State team 64-61, the Scarlet Knights stayed with Purdue for much of the first half. But playing without Omoruyi, who averaged 14.6 points and 7.5 rebounds in the first 14 games, took its toll. Freshman guard Caleb McConnell, however, was back in the lineup after leaving early with an injury at Minnesota.

Purdue: The Boilermakers continue to be dominant at home and move to 8-0 in home games this season. They're dominant against Rutgers at home, too. The Boilers have won the last three meetings with Rutgers in West Lafayette by a combined 85 points.

Pacers trounce Suns 131-97 INDIANAPOLIS (AP) —

Indiana has its sights set on the top of the Eastern Conference

On Tuesday night, the Phoenix Suns found themselves directly in the way of a determined Pacers team.

Bojan Bogdanovic scored 20 points and the Pacers wasted little time cruising to a 131-97 victory.

While impressive, Tuesday's lopsided win isn't the type of performance that's fueling the Pacers.

"We've proven we can (beat teams like Phoenix) before,' guard Victor Oladipo said. "The next step is winning against really good teams — the Raptors, Milwaukee, Celtics, Golden State. That's the next step, beating (those teams) consistently.

"At the end of the day, it's over. This game is completely over. We have a big game on Thursday against a team who's really close to us in the standings and the top of the East. We need to take care of business then. That's what it's all about."

The Pacers face Philadelphia on Thursday.

The Pacers got off to a fast start thanks to Bogdanovic, who scored the Indiana's first 10 points. The Pacers doubled the Suns' total in the first quarter, leading 38-19 at the end of the Myles Turner returned for the first time in four games to finish with 18 points and six rebounds. Turner was nursing a sore right shoulder over the last week. "There was definitely some rust," Turner said. "I was a step behind. But it was a great team performance and that's all that matters."

The Pacers led by as many as 37 in a game in which they never Cory Joseph scored eight of his 10 points in the first quarter, adding to Bogdanovic's hot start. Thaddeus Young scored 10 of his 12 points in the first half and finished the game with seven rebounds. Joseph was one of three Pacers who scored in double figures off the bench. Tyreke Evans scored 20 and Domantas Sabonis finished with 14 and eight rebounds in their usual reserve roles.

Indiana limited Devin Booker to eight points in 26 minutes. Rookie Deandre Ayton finished with 14 points and eight rebounds. T.J. Warren led Phoenix with 18 points and Kelly Oubre Jr. scored 16.

While the Warriorettes (16-4) still shot nearly 50 percent from the floor, they only took 40 shots total with 18 of those coming from behind the arc.

In the end Madison's steals were the difference. Madison forced 13 Scottsburg turnovers in the game, 12 of those via steals as the Cubs clogged the Scottsburg's passing lanes and challenged every Warriorette who ventured inside the arc.

"We've been playing a little bit of zone the second half of the season and at the beginning, it wasn't looking very good. I wasn't very comfortable with going to it," Bowyer said. "It's so funny these teams. At the beginning of the season, certain things are working and by the end of the season certain (other) things are clicking. Right now, (the zone) is clicking. They're talking, they're having fun and this was a good win for (senior) Bailey (Dyer) in her final home game."

Leading 24-22 at halftime, Madison began to take control of the game in the third quarter, leaning heavily on Nutley.

The sophomore center missed two short jumpers and a 3-pointer early but then hit nearly every shot she took while beginning to heat up in the second half.

Taking over the paint, Nutley scored semingly at will on the Warriorettes and powered Madison to a 41-35 lead after three quarters. She finished the game with a career-high 31 points on 12-of-17 shooting from the floor and 7-of-7 at the free-throw line.

"That was the first game really where I got in the middle and it really opened my eyes to see that doing that can really make me improve and the team," said Nutley, who also had 10 rebounds. "It just really carried my confidence throughout the game. I just wanted the ball every chance I could."

Nutley's basket early in the fourth coupled with a Young free throw gave Madison its biggest lead of the night, at 10 with 5:29 to go. Scottsburg began chipping away, cutting the lead to one before a Nutley three-point play put the Cubs ahead 49-45.

But back-to-back Madison turnovers, coupled with a 3-pointer by Bela Brewster and a layup by Clancy, gave Scottsburg the lead with just over a minute to play.

Bowyer, who hoarded her timeouts over the first three quarters, burned three in the final four minutes of the game as she tried to stop Scottsburg's momentum. "I looked at Jessie Dyer in one timeout and I told her that she had two minutes left to play with her sister on this floor," Bowyer said. "They responded so well." Nutley hit a pair of free throws to give the lead back to Madison and Clancy, the daughter of former Madison girls basketball coach Patty two free throws and Jessie Dyer stepped in front of a Clancy pass for the steal with two more free throws to push the lead back to five.

and Jaylah Mays had 13 to lead Scottsburg.

The victory was arguably Madison's biggest of the season as well as the biggest in Bowyer's young coaching career. The first-year coach played for Scottsburg coach and Hallof-Famer Donna Cheatham at Southwestern and she said that was a dream come true. "She is one of a heck of coaching as long as her."

Madison's final four games of the regular season will now all be on the road, starting with a make-up game on Thursday at Corydon Central.

IndyCar lands NTT as title sponsor

DETRIOT (AP) — IndyCar announced a multi-year title sponsorship deal Tuesday with NTT, a global information technology and communications company based in Japan.

The series will be called the NTT IndyCar Series. NTT Data, a subsidiary of parent company Nippon Telegraph and Telephone Corp., already sponsors a car for Chip Ganassi Racing and received enough exposure from that deal to warrant a larger piece of the open-wheel racing series. The season's first race is March 10 in St. Petersburg, Florida. The partnership revealed at the North American International Auto Show in Detroit also makes NTT the official technology partner of the IndyCar Series, Indianapolis Motor Speedway, the Indianapolis 500 and NASCAR's Brickyard 400

Madison's Val Gonzalez won a pair of conference titles and set another school record to lead the Lady Cubs at the Hoosier Hills Conference girls swimming championships at Floyd Central on Tuesday.

Gonzalez, a junior exchange student from Brazil, won the 100-yard butterfly in 59.19 to break her own school record in that event. She then added a second conference championship when she won the 50-yard freestyle in 24.78.

Powered by Gonzalez and two relays, Madison scored 64 points to place seventh in the event. Floyd Central won the HHC title with 330 points — the Highlanders' 10th in Gonzalez competed on both relay teams, Madison's only other top 10 finishers. She teamed with Lucy Lynch, Anne Grady and Tabetha Jameison to place sixth in the 200 free relay in a team-best 1:57.59 and seventh in the 200 medley relay on 2:15.63.
